And on top of that, today's a full moon.
Because today's Friday the 13th! And that means bad luck! Plus, we saw kitsune's wedding today.*

Kitsune's Wedding is a term used to describe a sun shower. It is said that this event happens when kitsune, a fox spirit, takes a bride. The wedding is supposedly a good omen in general but bad luck to those who see it.

Tenhou, or "Heaven's Combination," refers to when the dealer is dealt a winning combination on the first initial hand. A hand of Mahjong consists of 14 tiles, and since 136-144 tiles are in play in a game of mahjong, this is a very unlikely occurence.

Dai San Gen, or "Attack of the Three Dragons," is a combination where a player's hand has three dragon tiles of one color. A set of Mahjong tiles contains three sets of four dragon tiles which can be either Red, White, or Green. This is also a very difficult combination to get.

Dai Suu Shii, or "Big Four Winds," is a combination where a player's hand contains three triplets of each of the four wind tiles. A set of Mahjong tiles contains four sets of four wind tiles which can be either North, East, South, or West.

Shiisan Puutaa, or "Thirteen Different Tiles," is a combination where a player's hand contains one of each dragon, one of each wind, the two "terminals" (1 & 9) of each mahjong suit (Bamboo, Coins, and Characters), and one extra tile that must be the same as any of the other tiles. This is the most involved and complex combination in any game that this editor has ever heard of.

Release Notes

The Akagi Mahjong Set makes reference to Akagi, a series about a talented Mahjong player, which is serialized in Kindai Mahjong, the magazine that this oneshot was published in

Chen Ren Pou Tou, or "The Hand of Nine Sacred Lotus Lanterns," is a Mahjong combination where a player's hand contains 1, 1, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9, 9, and one tile to pair with one of the 2-8 tiles. All of these tiles must be of the same suit, and must have been dealt directly to the player's hand, not taken from another player's discarded tiles. In a standard game of Mahjong, there are 136-148 tiles in play, making this combo so rare that it's earned the nickname "Flawless."

Players call "Tenpai" when they are one tile away from winning.

A "pure" hand is one that consists of no tiles taken from another player's discarded tiles. Kudou's lack of knowledge about the finer points of Mahjong is apparent here, since Chen Ren Pou Tou must be a pure hand, when it's not, it's Chin Iı Soo, or a "One-Suiter."

Chombo is called when a player makes a mistake, such as playing out of turn, or in Kudou's case, exposing tiles when he shouldn't
